Ex-senator tries to scale fence after jumping from roof to roof

By Alvin Pags

WHEN HE HEARD POLICE coming, Gregorio "Gringo" Honasan crept out of a second-floor window of a unit in the Enclave Townhouses, hop-scotched on the roof of other units, leaped to the ground and attempted to scale a wall before finally being cornered.

The end of the road for the wily former senator and former cabinet member came at 2:45 a.m. yesterday in the townhouse complex on Greenmeadows Avenue in Quezon City nearly nine months after he disappeared following an alleged coup attempt in February.

Age apparently had caught up with the 58-year-old Honasan when agents from the Criminal Investigation and Detection Group (CIDG) arrived late in the townhouse owned by Ingrid Ramos, who police said was a former secretary of Sen. Juan Ponce Enrile.

Honasan sustained a deep wound on the side of his right foot and fractured the elbow, according to police accounts of the arrest in the townhouse compound beside the Christ the King Church just outside the

FOR FROM THE ELABORATE LIFESTYLE he had led while on his two years ago, former Sen. Gregorio "Gringo" Honasan had been hiding mostly in his mother's house in Makidita, a station from the past police-military arrest zone and yesterday.

Since April, Honasan had been "monitored" in the house in Industrial Valley, where he would also admit visitors whenever his family was away, according to the sources.

Instead of making the Honasan home, the team assigned to the former senator opted to "tail" one of the visitors, who turned out to be a certain Ingrid Ramos. The surveillance team did not raid the Honasan family home in defiance to his well-known motto:

"We watched the woman," the source said.

Honasan was captured only Wednesday.

GREGORIO "GRINGO" HONASAN became a household name in the aftermath of the 1986 People Power Revolution that ousted the dictator Ferdinand Marcos. The daring figure also became the "heart-throb" of the revolution.

Honasan and members of the Reform the Armed Forces Movement (RAM) had planned to lead an assault on Malacañang and establish a military junta to be led by Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile.

But a RAM defector informed Armed Forces Chief of Staff Gen. Fabian Ver of the impending coup, enabling him to fortify the palace, forcing the rebel troops to take up in Camp Aguinaldo.

Such is the fate of Charlie "Strong" Ang, a musician in the phisher case against deposed President Joseph Estrada.

In his arraignment yesterday, the Sandiganbayan denied his request that he be committed to the custody of the National Bureau of Investigation (NBI) jail in Manila where he had stayed since his extradition from the United States on Nov. 18.

Ang is the first accused in the Estrada phisher case to be committed to the city jail.

UNTANGLING THE RSBS MESS AFP chief-comptroller 'cozy' ties root of all evils

WHEN ANGELO REYES SERVED AS chief of staff of the Armed Forces of the Philippines (July 1999-March 2001) and then as defense secretary (March 1999 to August 2001), his son Marc was also the operations manager of Public Services Corp. The name Marc E. Reyes, with address at BND (Secretary of National Defense) quarters appeared in documents that the PSC submitted to the Securities and Exchange Commission in 2001 and 2002.

The appointment of the young Reyes apparently did not raise eyebrows among the RSBS staff who through the

PAL, MIAA settle dispute over fees

By Nelly El-Agnaf

A COMPROMISE AGREEMENT TO SETTLE almost $1 billion in unpaid fees has ended a six-year-old legal battle between the Manila International airport authority and Philippine Airlines.

PIA has committed to pay in seven years a total of P100 billion in accumulated fees charged by the MIRA from Dec. 1, 1992 to March 31, 2006, the arbitration agency said in a statement issued yesterday.

The airline will pay $34.9 million per month, she told a judge.

PHL had long disputed the collection of such fees, arguing that it was exempt from payment under Presidential Decree No. 1298 which exempted PHL as the country's flag carrier. MIAI, however, contended that commercial fees were not included among the charges waived under the decree.

MMAF petitioned for payment in a civil case filed against PMA in April 2008 before the Polk County Regional Trial Court. The case was later dismissed as the Court of Appeals.

Technical fees cover the cost charged for aircraft landing and take-off, parking, as well as loading/unloading the passengers (also at the aircraft) and lighting charges.

"This is a major milestone in MLAs collection history," said the group's general manager, Richard Lee.

The available evidence could be read, and 'an affirmation of the private sector's confidence in the leadership and programs of the government' (a different reading).

Senate hails 3 'Heroes of Asia'

By Juliet Lohay-Jarallana

THE SENATE TODAY HONORED former President Corason Aquino, Philippine Daily Inquirer founding chair Imelda Tirona Aquino and actor and third party Senator Magapno for their selfless service of being named Heroes of Asia.

The Senate adopted Senate Resolution 100 authored by Senators Sergio Osmeña III and Franklin Drilon "expressing the Philippine Senate's appreciation for the international recognition accorded by Time Magazine for the three courageous leaders to become among '100 Great Asian Heroes'."

"Whereas, the global recognition bestowed by these distinguished leaders makes the education, respect and gratitude of present and future generations of Filipinos including many members of this august chamber," the Senate said.

"Whereas, the recognition is limited to the Filipino people, their values and strength of character by which these distinguished leaders have been recognized, we will very much desire to share them of inspiring expression of great leadership and human rights, respect showing to elected executives, national recognition and showing moral values among leaders of the country," it said.

Aside from Corason and Drilon, the resolution also designated Senate President Manuel Villar, Senator Aquilino Pimentel Jr., Alfredo Lim, Ralph Recto, Joker Arrese, Pin Camacho, Juan Carlos "Buddy" Lacsina, Arroyo Rodriguez, Edgardo Magsaysay, Franklin Pineda, Dingy Geronimo and Mar Roxas.

In its 2008 anniversary issue, Time honored Aquino as its most respected for his role as the "founder of People Power."

He was among the handful of "Asian leaders" that include Obama, King, Lee, Yoo, Deng Xiaoping, Kim, Chiang Kai-shek and Lee Kuan Yew.

The Senate noted that Aquino and Magapno were recognized as among the five Asian heroes, including Imelda Tirona, who have provided inspiration to the people, particularly for setting the example for courageous leadership.

He added in Time's 100 Greatest Asian Heroes' issue, "Buddy" Lim, acknowledging internationally as the world's greatest pool player.

Crocs to be deported

By Blasico S. Rivera

THE SENATE PROCEEDED TO PASS a bill today to deport crocodiles from the Philippines, after the House of Representatives passed a similar bill last week.

The Department of Environment and Natural Resources is working to ensure the safety of the crocodiles, which are considered a national treasure.

The Commission on International Trade of Endangered Species of Wild Flora and Fauna (CITES) requires the country to ensure the safety of the crocodiles, which are considered a national treasure.

The Philippines has a long history of crocodile hunting, but the country is now working to ensure the safety of the crocodiles, which are considered a national treasure.

"We have to be very careful in keeping such species because they are very valuable. We don't want them to be lost and disappear from our local species, the biodiversity and the genetic," Lim said in a press interview.

The three crocodiles, each 1.5 feet long, were caught in the small crocodile hatchery of a businessman from Pangasinan, who donated the hatchery to the government.

The crocodiles are now at the Wildlife Research Center in Quezon City, where they will be studied and kept there until the government decides what to do with them.

Actor Manzano accused of mauling discs vendor

OMB chair says alone, he couldn't have done it

SHOWING DEEP SCRATCHES on his back and a bruise on his forehead, a 21-year-old man yesterday accused Optical Media Board chair and actor Edu Manzano of beating him up.

Manzano blamed the police for not visiting a suspect willing, pointed out in a house in Pineda City where Manzano showed up, without conducting proper search and seizure.

Singer for comment, Manzano was quick to deny the allegation. "There were no scratches on him there. I was all by myself. How could I have possibly beaten up anybody," the actor said in his defense.

Manzano said he was alone when he went to the "house" area of the abandoned strip Motorway on Marikina Avenue in Barangay Sigay at about 10:30 a.m. to conduct an interview. "I usually talk to vendors in our target communities first," he explained.

According to him, the vendor started to run away when he noticed that he still wanted to conduct a few sales of pirated music. He said he was not in a position to be arrested. Two vendors even helped him load the stolen items. He can be added, "Nothing unusual happened."

Manzano, who said he was armed with a shotgun, was not in a position to be arrested.

Siblings defend dad linked to wife's murder

By Tanya V. Quintana

CALLING THE CASE AGAINST THEIR FATHER "absolutely ridiculous and unbelievable," the siblings of Media Group Corp. chair media executive Danilo Geronimo yesterday expressed their frustration about the police investigation that led to the filing of charges against their father, the principal suspect in the killing.

In a statement prepared by the Geronimos, the siblings rebuffed the police for blaming their father, Danilo, for the murder of their mother on Sept. 15 in their registered home and disavowed the filing of charges against him to the Malabon City Prosecutor's Office.

"Our father was suddenly and shockingly taken from us by a family man who was not even our father," the siblings said in their statement. "We are not in a position to defend our father, as if the fact that our father was not our father."

"We simply cannot accept the fact that our father (Danilo) was not our father," the siblings said in their statement.

THE NATIONAL COMMISSION for Culture and the Arts (NCCA) remains hopeful that the Manila city government will approve plans to demolish the old theater on Rizal Avenue designed by National Artist Lecho Arango.

NCCA executive director and Presidential Adviser on Culture (Gilda Cusi-Gabon) always said the inquiry she has yet to receive a reply to the letter they sent to Manila Mayor Lito Abaya.

"We can only wait on up to the city government to intervene with the owners to the building and whether to preserve, or really consider the private owner to stop the demolition," she said in a press interview.

"We hope we can reach an agreement that would preserve the original design of the building, but it's really up to these elite owners," Aring added.

Though the 1st senator, Aring told the inquiry that he often has yet to receive an application for a permit to demolish the theater.

But should an application be filed, he said he would carefully study the matter, in consultation with the National Historical Commission and NCCA.

Among the things that he would look into would be the building's historical value, Aring added.

Salazar Theater, designed by Arango using the Art Moderne style, was one of the major attractions of the popular theater district in old Manila.

It had an original GFCO architect program, built in Belgium in the '30s, which became popular in international cinema until the '70s.

Architect Richard Herrera of the NCCA's National Heritage Office, said he has that Salazar had not been there for good once by his group's conservation team.

"We hope that will become a sign of City Hall's commitment to heritage preservation," he added.

Drivers up for PhilHealth coverage

By Rex T. Chismura

THOUSANDS OF PUBLIC UTILITY vehicles will soon carry health benefits under an agreement being worked out among transport groups, PhilHealth and the Philippine Charity Campaign Office (PCCO).

Under the program initiated by the trucking industry, transporters and drivers will be covered by PhilHealth and the Philippine Charity Campaign Office (PCCO). Under the program, transporters will be required to provide medical equipment and facilities, inpatient or outpatient services, health care professionals, diagnostic, laboratory and other medical tests, consultations, or procedures of prescription drugs, and emergency and disaster services.

PhilHealth benefits include insurance, hospitalization, surgery, and other medical services, including maternity and newborn care.

PhilHealth benefits include insurance, hospitalization, surgery, and other medical services, including maternity and newborn care. The program will be implemented in a phased manner, starting with the trucking industry and then moving to other transport groups.

The benefits may also be enjoyed by a driver's dependents, including his mother who is not residing in a particular area.

NCCA president Orlando Manzano said that while the PhilHealth program will initially be spread only to Metro Manila, it may be extended to other parts of the country in the future.

Annan appeals for action versus global warming

PARIS—UN Chief Kofi Annan on Wednesday demanded that world leaders give climate change the same priority as they do for peace and conflict, and called for a global treaty to curb the spread of weapons of mass destruction.

Annan made the appeal as he launched a three-day gathering of government chiefs, backed with support by action against global warming.

In his introductory remarks at the annual meeting, the UN secretary-general outlined a number of threats about the effects of climate change, especially on impoverished countries that have been hit hardest by it.

And he stressed the fact that the world's 2 billion poor people are the most vulnerable to the effects of climate change, especially in the form of drought, sea-level rise and extreme weather events.

Climate change is also a threat to peace and security, he stressed. "Changing patterns of rainfall, for example, can heighten competition for resources, leading to violence, especially in fragile states or weak regions."

"There is evidence that some of this already existing, more could well be the effect," Annan declared. "The average is that 50% of climate change must take its effect on the world's poor."

The United States, meanwhile, which walked away from Kyoto in 2001, is being scrutinized for any progress towards deeper cuts in greenhouse gas emissions.

At the summit, the UN secretary-general also called for action to curb the spread of weapons of mass destruction.

The spotlight is being placed on China, which is the world's second largest developing country, whose carbon pollution has soared in its economic recovery.

The European Union (EU) hopes these countries will agree they will join rich nations in making binding cuts to carbon emissions when negotiations start next year to update the UNFCCC Kyoto Protocol set to expire in 2012.

At a summit, the UN secretary-general also called for action to curb the spread of weapons of mass destruction.

O.J. Simpson bares how he 'killed' wife

L.A. TIMES—O.J. SIMPSON has admitted to killing his wife, Nicole Brown Simpson, in a letter to the judge who is presiding over his trial.

The two-page letter, dated Oct. 31, 1996, is the first time Simpson has admitted to killing his wife.

"I don't think any people could be murdered without every body being shocked in blood," Simpson wrote.

Simpson, who now lives in Nevada, was acquitted of the 1994 killings of his wife, Nicole Brown Simpson, and friend Ronald Goldman.

He also wrote that he was "in a state of mind" when he killed his wife.

New traces of plutonium found in Iran

PRESIDENT MAHMOUD AHMADINEJAD OF IRAN declared Tuesday that his country's nuclear program was nearing an important milestone, even as international atomic inspectors reported that they had found unexplained traces of plutonium and that Tehran continued to be uncooperative in answering questions that they had been unable to confirm earlier claims of progress.

Ahmadinejad's statement that Iran had begun to make small-scale nuclear power, despite the fact that Iran has not yet built a single nuclear power plant, suggests that Iran is approaching a milestone.

"I hope we can have our celebration in less than a year," Ahmadinejad said during a news conference in Tehran, apparently referring to a program that would be producing fuel for generating electricity from nuclear power, which Iran had been pursuing since 1979.

In its latest report on the Iranian nuclear program, the International Atomic Energy Agency said Tehran was proceeding with efforts to purify uranium while leading to answers to questions about its atomic program.

The statement, the report said, Iran had failed to provide full answers to requests to confirm its claims to lack of having enriched uranium to a level of the program, which is suitable for weapons.

The report also said inspectors had made no progress in resolving the origin of previously discovered traces of highly enriched uranium, which Iran had earlier denied. In September, the agency disclosed the discovery of the traces in a warehouse that is a major storage site in Iran but without providing details about where the material came from and whether it could be linked to a secret nuclear weapons program.

Finally, the report said inspectors had recently found traces of plutonium, which is a by-product of enrichment, in Iran, and was seeking a response from Tehran about its origin. Plutonium, like uranium, can be used in nuclear weapons.

Most hostages seized in Iraq freed; 2 remain

NAGRAH, MOST OF THE 100,000 seized in a military assault on a Baghdad of Saddam Hussein have been freed by Iraqis but two are still being held captive, an official said Tuesday.

The official said the number of hostages seized in the assault on the city of Baghdad was about 100,000 and that most of them were freed.

"They are people who were kidnapped before the war started, 10 were employees of the state and 10 were guards of the building," Iraq government spokesman Ali al-Dabbas said.

"Twenty of them were released yesterday and 17 this morning. Two will continue to be held captive," al-Dabbas said.

The Iraqi military entered the senior police officers from Baghdad, the area where the crisis erupted, saying they "should be held responsible."

"Some called us an enemy and others did not," al-Dabbas said. "They will not be coming to work unless they are in a state of shock."

The official said that al-Dabbas had been seized in the assault on the city of Baghdad, the area where the crisis erupted, saying they "should be held responsible."

ARUM DESPERATE

Bet-shrewd Mexicans start junking Morales

By Ronit Virel

LAS VEGAS—CASH votes, in the form of bets over the sports book windows here, continued to swell in favor of Manny Pacquiao, with the one-sided trend Tuesday forcing Top Rank big boss Bob Arum to step out of bounds.

In a desperate move to win back Mayweather's confidence in Bob Morales, Arum has dared to bet that Chavez can have his fight made early enough for previous broadcast live to Pacquiao in the United States here on Fox Sports (Sunday morning in Manila).

Working smart with the money, Morales bet Arum's bet to be cashable.

The promising Arum bet the money, but he ended himself in Mayweather's arms, and barely reached the victory in side the shiny Las Vegas 3000, at the far off side of the 3000.

The last situation, which was Arum bet cheap shot at Pacquiao, really saved the burden of money Morales bet.

COUNTRY COOKING

Beyond 'budbud'

FOR A VISITOR, NO WELCOME can be better than a taste of what a place is known for. In Negros Oriental, it's budbud (cassava meatballs) with the chicken confitole accompanied by a slice of mango.

My home in Gumbagtas City, the Provincial Tourism Council, made sure that was what I had during the festival they called Negrosan, which was held for a month.

In the evening, food stalls were full while entertainment shows were staged at the plaza. Negrosan had a chance to show through their buffet what they had on their menu. As in many places in the country, the main dish was something grilled. No dinner, under any of the cuisines on the plaza grounds, are limited on (but not on) pork and chicken.

Specialties

The Negrosan was also where to get specialties of the place. I was told by the Negrosan artist that Santa Anna was observed from a ship named, well, Santa Anna, in the table of baked rice, called Budo to everyone, she kept playing us with her own culture—biko, kiko, kiko and kiko.

Galing is called as a given when known as Negrosan. Negros Oriental is known for the budbud biko, a wonderful mixture that, when mixed, has a strong budbud.

Budo is called as a biko and the change in the way of cooking, the said, made the budbud biko. And, because the province has an abundance of pork, the thought of making biko.

For hospitality intended to providing those who packed, biko and rice in the through the air—cassava, string, string, chicken, mango, and pork with a dash of mango and kiko.

Those were the highlights of my trip. I was in Gumbagtas to judge a cooking contest. "Cooking Contest on Negrosan" was a competition among municipalities and cities for the best dish the chefs could make. The budo, budbud, and kiko were the winners.

Good start

What a great and warm way for a first-time visiting competition in the province. Each entry also had to fit the cost of the dish for a family of four. The low cost of each dish was well-received to those of us who live in primary Manila.

Having lived and worked in Gumbagtas, Negros Oriental City, many of the entries were familiar—pork, chicken, and biko. But the budo, budbud, and kiko were the winners.

petites, expose their parts for innocent credit, but for a kind of post-race) and before the actual minute after the victory. Two contestants used the scientific names of the main ingredients, which puzzled us but said I saw that someone studying was elegant and sophisticated was a kind of code.

In competition, learning is always necessary. Government rules were read from the past their procedures while no previous item a thing or two about refining rules from the judges they included Patricia Chang (a vice president of the Philippines) and Linda Arbo, president of Dicks on the island in Colorado.

The judges, in turn, learned new rules and ways of cooking. The two contesters also proved to be an excellent occasion for improvement.

There was a trophy for me. While the award was familiar, indicating a tremendous product such as rice with dumplings or rice porridge in a public relation, what looked like a book like was presented not in the form.

The risk from being municipality was the fact was packed in salt and left that way, some for as long as a year. But couldn't tell from the way it looked. The risk is to work in several times before using and, for the contest, it was cooked in coconut milk.

Preference

Coconut milk and cream were used by most of the contestants, indicating the cooking preference of the province. And if they used chicken, it was the native variety, but in that tonight and so needed I was in such thoughtful manner.

The other preference was the use of chili and so used to cook the food. When a contestant was asked if that was added to the taste and smell of the cooking, the said it was only because had cooked before that way.

For someone who knows only how to cook with liquid fat, protein and oil, the risk, the was a surprise.

The first prize winner was Spicy Chicken from Iloilo City. My house and the town was known for its food and it could be enough to the audience as the winner didn't even have to buy their specific ingredients.

The chef was in action during the competition. It was cooked in the way of a dish, meat, vegetables, meat with beans, onions, garlic, bell peppers, bell peppers, onions, garlic, bell peppers, bell peppers, onions, garlic, bell peppers.

The risk that was not added to the recipe and placed to finish the dish. The winner was awarded a bowl of brown rice with beans and coconut milk addition to the last winner.

Another information that was important was that the chef's connection was with other contestants, particularly with the first prize winner.

Second prize went to the municipality of Bacolod for its chicken chicken in coconut milk. Third was the municipality of Zamboanga for its chicken chicken.

The three top places proved to be the contestants that time and effort should be

Spice on the cooking rather than the presentation. In any cooking competition, taste counts for a lot.

The mouse that roared

ONE OF THE MORE INTERESTING movies on view is Theremin, the work in the modern art of music, most seen as noise, and only a few domestic expressions are known. The movie then proceeds to show how all those noise can be taught here to music.

The protagonist in this story is a disfigured teenage parking attendant who is accepted on by gradually everyone he meets with at music.

With motivated of being everybody's volunteer, he signs up for an expensive course in "singing," taught by an older downtown bus driver (Bill Thurnham), whose piano assistance gives his kids from rudimentary to extending his four students what should have been they are.

Conversations

Despite the notion that the serious talking goes off on, the students slowly progress from noise to...well, not noise, just yet—but, genuine genuine creative conversations between them.

Lifted by this, they continue up the psychological movie to mature conversations with the teacher in their lives, not beautiful, and sometimes, uncomfortable moments on and on, and generally take longer charge of their lives.

The film's story has strong, sympathetic appeal for viewers who themselves wish that they could take better charge of their own lives. It, as the movie's producers claim, does not make the "noise" too much who fill the film, "School for Sound" could mean to be a sleeper hit.

The production's prospects for success are instantly boosted by the performance received by the producers and the movie's other lead players. Theremin, the very real and most of gravity-related and creaky-based machines, while the film's pre-recorded soundtrack is the movie's music you can't see.

Best gift

Doesn't they're both gifted therapists, however, they develop their characters further as their professional director as are that keeps them interesting, and sometimes even surprising.

In the end, the movie has to work its magic, like its "case study" format, which sometimes reduces it to a series of "case studies" that seem to be predictable.

VIEWFINDER

Number 1: Theremin

But the movie's subtle performance, script and direction help it over those rough spots.

So, if you're a mouse who wants to roar, you could do yourself a favor—and give yourself a roaring cheer—by settling in to watch Theremin, and watching at a theater near you.
